Modbury and Para Vista Uniting Churches

The August Gathering Host Congregations

Don Sinnott

The congregation at Modbury has a long history; Para Vista a somewhat shorter one.

by another in 1926 and then the present building in 1971. Extensive renovations to the Modbury Uniting Church complex were carried out in 2011.

During the first part of the twentieth century, Modbury was the “mother church” of Methodism in the area: the senior partner in the then Modbury Methodist Circuit from which most of today’s Uniting congregations in the north east were spawned.

The first services of Wesleyan Methodists in the Modbury area date from 1840 and would have been held in private homes. The first building dates from 1863 and was replaced

Today, community-directed emphases still defines the congregations

Para Vista was one of those congregations, beginning as a small group of worshippers in 1964 and meeting in a pair of transportable buildings placed end-to-end. The make-shift accommodation served for five years until a permanent building, now the church hall, was completed. The present church building was opened in 1981.

Interior of Para Vista Church

In a pattern often replicated, a lot of the energy of the Modbury and Para Vista congregations of earlier days went into buildings. But by no means all – by the 1960s and 1970s, times of rapid change in housing development in the north east and challenges of new ideas, the congregations were at the forefront of innovation in worship, social justice and care for the marginalised. They were fortunate indeed to be served by a series of scholarly and energetic ministers who must have felt at times that they were sitting on a powder keg.

Today, these community-directed emphases still define the congregations. Emulating the Jesuits mantra that 'it is easier to seek forgiveness than approval', ideas keep bubbling up and programs are initiated. Modbury has been a recognised leader in support to refugee and new-arrival communities, initially Sudanese, now extended to immigrant people from many countries. Para Vista hosts Mainly Music and Messy Church programs as well as sustaining a focus on service to the aged. Other continuing initiatives include fresh expressions of worship and contemplation, Bible study groups, mind-stretching seminars, a monthly breakfast group and a "safe place" theological exploration group. Programs that the congregations sustained in earlier years have included a weekly coffee shop, an op-shop and an associated emergency relief program (which continues).

As is the case for many churches today, the Modbury and Para Vista congregations are now smaller in number than they used to be, with more grey hair and fewer children in their church community. But the essence remains – a group of people of energy and enthusiasm working out their faith with imagination and commitment in a world in which change is constant. The congregations, which have shared a full-time minister for most of recent history, this year farewelled Rev Tony Goodluck as minister. They are currently seeking a shared 0.8 FTE placement, with Rev Jock Dunbar as interim minister. The people of these congregations look to a future in which they may continue to be the loving people of God in the Modbury/Para Vista area.

July 30, 2017 Mordialta Uniting welcomes Rev Bob Hutchinson. Margaret Cargill reflects on the changing landscape and introduces Bob.

Mordialta Uniting farewelled Rev. Dr Jonathan Barker at the end of June after a longer than anticipated (since 1 May 2016!), and very deeply appreciated, period as our Minister in Supply. On 30 July, we welcomed our new Minister in Settlement, Rev. Bob Hutchinson, together with his wife Mandy and their (uni student) children, Lauren and Joel.

Mordialta has experienced quite a bit of change in the last little while, and it will be great to have the chance to settle into a new pattern of ministry and mission with Bob. He comes to us from previous placements in Kangaroo Island, Spicer and Athelstone, with gifts described as wisdom, preaching, teaching small groups, worship curator, administration, cooking, acceptance, and tolerance. Bob's personal statement of his primary theological values includes that "the core message of my ministry would have to be grace, the pardon, the love, the forgiveness, and acceptance of and by God. This is totally God's work directed at humanity, because God is love. The message of grace is the best news ever. We are to accept it as a gift to us. It is that simple. Ministry is also encouraging the church community to share that message of grace in the wider community, to love, accept, and help."

Bob has a clear view that social justice, the inclusion of all people and hospitality to the stranger are essential to the working of the church – a clear match to Morialta's values. We look forward to learning how his talent for cooking and his favoured approach of 'intentional loitering' will further contribute to our mission of sharing the message of God's grace.

Regenerating Places of Faith

October 30, 9.00 am – 4.30 pm

Clayton Wesley Uniting Church

Corner The Parade and Portrush Road, Beulah Park.

South Australia has many historic church buildings that have served their congregations and communities well over many decades. Now, though, many shrinking and ageing congregations are struggling to maintain their places of faith. The “Regenerating Places of Faith” conference will explore how congregations can be strengthened, including through development partnerships with other community groups and local businesses, to restore and adapt historic church buildings for worship and as innovative places that enable communities to flourish.

Conference is sponsored by Clayton Wesley Uniting Church, The State Heritage Unit, the National Trust, the Anglican Church and Arcuate Architecture

Further details will be published soon.
